Language and Society

Thursday 6:20 - 8:00 PM

Calagione

Online Mixed (Zoom and Required Brightspace)

How does language shape our view of the world and how do we use language in everyday life to create our social worlds? What orients our choice of the codes and contexts we deploy in speaking? These are some of the questions that we will be exploring together in the field of linguistic anthropology. Much of this course will examine the relationship between language and cu power, social identities, and culture. In all of our readings and in the written assignments we will continue to push ourselves to think about the relationships of power and the social imaginaries that are a part of everyday language use. We will look at language practices and constructions of class, race, gender, ethnicity, and nation. We will cover topics such as language and worldview, social stereotyping and discrimination, bi-and multilingualism, language socialization, literacy practices and schooling. Pre-req: Intro level anthropology, social science or Equivalent. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

EDCE 20614, 1CWA [37257]

ECE II: Development, Assessment, Teaching and Learning in Inclusive Settings

Monday 4:30 - 6:10 PM

Cruz

Hybrid Asynchronous (In-person and Required Brightspace)

Students construct a working understanding of theorists such as Dewey, Piaget and Vygotsky, as applied to young children and the curriculum and practices that support their growth. Students will explore typical and inclusive classroom practices in depth. These understandings are grounded in systematic observations culminating in a child study. 15 hours fieldwork required. Offered in the Spring annually. Pre-requisite: EDCE 20604. 4 hr.; 4 cr.

Online Asynchronous

McDonald

Online Asynchronous (Brightspace)

Throughout the decades—whether in the U.S. or abroad—the literatures of immigration have provided a source of innovative writing, as well as an important voice in the debates concerning immigration policy. Through the use of various texts—literature, film, media, and legal documents—this course will explore the notion of identity, especially as it relates to the concepts of “home” and “homeland”. We will complement our literary readings with a comparative study of immigration policy of countries including the U.S., Canada, and the United Kingdom. Class discussion, several short discussion papers, and a final project will be required. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

Online Synchronous (Zoom)

Used to describe everything from the hit tv series Six Feet Under to Gabriel Garcia Marquez's Nobel Prize masterpiece One Hundred Years of Solitude, the phrase Magical Realism appears frequently in reviews and criticism. It has become common media parlance. But what does it really mean? Where is the magic? Where is the realism? As a storytelling form, how does it function? And for whom? Our course will explore how Magical Realism emerges from different communities in the Americas at different times and places. We will visit novels and films from the Caribbean, Latin America, Native America, and the African American South. Authors may include Alejo Carpentier, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Edwidge Danticat, and Jesmyn Ward, among others. Films may include Guantanamo(Cuba), Like Water for Chocolate (Mexico), and Daughters of the Dust (USA), among others. A key question will guide the course. How does Magical Realism offer alternative ways of knowing the world as it is? 3 hr.; 3 cr. (G)

Slavery, Gender and Colonial Legacies in the Caribbean (Graduate)

Tuesday 5:30 - 7:10 PM

Marinez

Online Synchronous (Zoom)

This course examines the legacies of colonialism across the Caribbean, from the unspeakable violence that began with the genocide of the autochthonous communities and the enslavement of populations forcibly imported from Africa to the various modes of ideological justifications and their spiraling effects across the region over time. A focus on gender will explore questions of miscegenation, women's refusal of forced reproduction, and various modes of rebellion that culminated with the Haitian Revolution—an event that, like a domino effect, dismantled an entire system across the Americas and intervened in renewed debates on human rights. We will also see how colonialism is not a thing of the past—it persists to this day through legislation, state-sponsored violence, extractive economies, environmental depredation, and anti-Black narratives. Classic and recent scholarship in history, social theory, cultural studies, environmental studies, and literary works will animate our class discussions and writing assignments over the semester. 3hr.; 3 cr.(G)

IAS 23304, 3CWA [37460]The Essay*Wednesday 6:20 - 8:00 PM*Moore*Hybrid Asynchronous (In-person and Required Brightspace)

The essay often gets a bad rap these days. It's frequently associated with the five-paragraph work of formal essay writing. But the essay, in its purest form, is the exploration of an idea, no matter how many paragraphs or diversions—stylistic or rhetorical—it takes. The word essay itself comes from the old French essai, which means, “to try,” and the Latin: rudimentum, which means “trial or attempt.” So, how do we define Creative Non-Fiction? It's not quite journalism. It's not quite “formal” essay writing but essay writing in its wholesome form. Creative Non-Fiction is a branch of writing that employs the literary techniques usually associated with actual people, places, or events. Creative Non-Fiction requires imagination—it evokes an image, draws on emotion, and it creates a lasting impression on the reader. In this class, we will “try” and write about our lives as we mirror, and read from a broad category of prose works such as personal essays and memoirs, narrative essays, observational and descriptive essays. This course will introduce students to cultural and literary theory. We will survey a number of important schools of critical theory, including formalism, structuralism, deconstruction, psychoanalytic, new historicism, post-colonial and cultural studies. Theorists studied will include Roland Barthes, Michel Foucault, Susan Sontag, and Sigmund Freud. Their theory will be studied alongside a variety of “texts”, including the poetry of William Wordsworth and Samuel Coleridge, Shakespeare’s The Tempest, Flaubert’s Madame Bovary, and Anderson’s Winesburg, Ohio, as well as Jamaica Kincaid’s Annie John, the art of Edward Hopper, the Log of Christopher Columbus, The National Defense Education Act of 1954, and Why Johnny Can’t Read. The goal is to acquire a new critical vocabulary --“critique”--and, of course, to sharpen critical reading, thinking and writing skills. Students will be required to write a number of shorter essays on the above texts and a final ten-page critical essay on that perennial bestseller, written by none other than Dr. Seuss, The Cat in the Hat. The Hemispheric Atlantic represents the point of contact between: indigenous peoples both honored (and exoticised) and certainly exploited (if not completely decimated) by colonial and neocolonial powers; Africans taken forcefully from throughout their continent through complex systems of slave trading; Europeans engaged in the colonial machine; and later immigrant groups from Asia. As such, Vodou, Regla de Ocha, and Candomblé, among others, as systems of sacred knowledge, have interacted with revolutionary theories deliberated transatlantically among public spaces as geographically divergent as France, the Netherlands, North America, the Caribbean, and Central and South America. As Susan Buck-Morss has argued, the notions of Freemasonry, Vodou, and revolutionary thought were far more imbricated one in the other in the colonial era than they are in how we research and study them today. The course will then look at persons, who have served both legend and history, individuals such as Boukman Dutty and Cécile Fatiman who led the insurrection that supposedly ignited the Haitian Revolution; Tituba – an African/Guyanese/Barbadian slave, who was one of the first victims of the Salem witchcraft trials; or Marie Lavau, a free black woman (or rather possibly three generations of free black women of the same name) who ‘practiced Vodou’ in Louisiana. Our primary sources will be novels, narrative films, and documentaries. Using literary analysis as our primary research methodology, we will draw on scholarship about the philosophical, social, and historical contexts that have shaped both the moment depicted in our primary texts, as well as the publishing circumstances of the given text. 4 hr, 4 cr. IAS 31219, 2CWM [37496]History, Culture and Politics of Hip Hop*Tuesday 6:20 - 8:00 PM*Orange*Online Mixed (Zoom and Required Brightspace)

Unbeknownst to many, hip-hop is not simply rap music. Also, its humble beginning in the Bronx was not solely the expressions of African-Americans. Although the music was always the center gravitational force, art and dance were always critical elements. The significance of the Disc Jockeys (DJs) and the dancers have receded; the streaming colors have been washed from trains and imaginations, but for better or worse the Masters of Ceremony (MCs), or rappers, remain as its most prominent and industrious representatives.

This course will chart the history of the elements associated with hip-hop, which some believe formed the Hip-hop nation. In this course the lyrics of rappers will be privileged as a source of our interrogation of the political and cultural worlds that spawned Rap music, and still serve as its most consistent muse. We will assess the role of Caribbean cultural influences which contributed to the creation of hip-hop, but have been reinvented in various recent musical forms, such as Reggaeton that exist in hip-hop's orbit. Accompanying a close inspection of rap lyrics will be an exploration of the myriad critiques and analyses of Journalists and intellectuals. No careful exploration of Hip-hop could be complete without a keen focus on the effects of successful marketing of Rap music, and such ancillaries as hip-hop fashion.

The objective of this course is to present various theories and methodologies that I hope will be appropriated in the formation of your own understandings of Hip-hop, and other artistic expressions with grand political implications. I intend for this course to also offer another vantage point from which to interpret U.S. society and politics. As always, this course is intended to further students' abilities to think critically, analyze effectively, and write competently. 4hr., 4cr. (W)(U)

Gentrification Globalized

Online Asynchronous

Schaller

Online Asynchronous (Brightspace)

“The right to the city is far more than the individual liberty to access urban resources: it is the right to change ourselves by changing the city. It is, moreover, a common rather an individual right since this transformation inevitably depends upon the exercise of a collective power to reshape the processes of urbanization. The freedom to make and remake our cities and ourselves is, I want to argue, one of the most precious yet most neglected of human rights.” (Harvey 2008, 23)

We live above all in an urban world, one marked by spatial, economic and racial segregation as well as political and cultural suppression and displacement. This course examines gentrification both from a theoretical and an advocacy perspective. Gentrification and displacement are not only threatening the right to the city of working class and even middle class New Yorkers, who are being evicted and excluded from neighborhoods across the city by an apparently natural, economic, process of transformation. Gentrification and displacement are a global phenomenon, and they are the symptoms of planning strategies implemented through public-private policy partnerships. Public officials, real estate lobbying groups, private consulting firms, and financial institutions as well as “gentrifiers” play active roles in the redevelopment schemes that have restructured central cities and urban neighborhoods across the country, indeed across the world. In this course, we will examine various definitions of gentrification in order to unpack a word we seem to hear everywhere but whose meaning has been transformed, especially in the media, to obscure the relationship between gentrification and displacement and to obscure the actors advocating for, leading or supporting gentrification processes. Gentrification has not gone uncontested. We will explore resistance to gentrification from the local neighborhood perspective as well as investigate the linkages organizers have created to build trans-local and international organizing efforts, especially around the right to the city and the right not to be excluded from the city. 4 hr. 4 cr (W)(U)

Philosophy and the City

Online Asynchronous

Clark

Online Asynchronous (Brightspace)

Urban environments have existed since the beginning of western civilization. As such, they became another topic for philosophers to think and write about in their work. In thinking through the lens of the city, philosophers tackled myriad topics pertaining to urban life. How and why are cities created in the first place? Once a city center is founded, how does planning for its future affect its growth and the placement of urban populations within it? Should cities be governed any differently than more rural locales? If so, how so? In what ways do cities affect the mental life of their inhabitants? What part, if any, should the aesthetic play in urban planning? How do representations of city space interact with those same spaces becoming spaces of representation of particular persons, places, and/or things? Why is it that cities often become the birthplace of movements of resistance? In the age of the ubiquitous “security” camera, have cities become a panopticon, and if so, is that to be lauded or condemned? And what do philosophers make of the recent idea of the “Global City”? 4 hr. 4cr. (W)(U)

IAS 31709, 3CWM [37606]Youth and the Right to the City: Planning, Participation, and Urban Design*Wednesday 6:00 - 8:30 PM*Schaller*Online Mixed (Zoom and Required Brightspace)

Young people, especially adolescents, are often pathologized, ignored and left out of the design and political life of cities. In this course, we will center the right to the city of youths and explore how we might design not just child-friendly but youth-friendly cities. We will define what we mean by “the right to the city” and how we center young people in the struggle for the right to the city. Major topics will include, but will not be limited to: youth culture, street art and graffiti; LGBTQ youth and the right to the city; youth social movements; urban culture, space and skateboarding; teenagers, sense of place and belonging, youth and participatory research; as well as youth participation in urban planning. 4 hr.; 4 cr.(W)(U)

IAS 32185, 3CWA [37607]Sociology of the Deaf*Wednesday 6:20 - 8:00 PM*Ortiz-Suloway*Hybrid Asynchronous (In-person and Required Brightspace)

Many (hearing) people think of Deafness as a one-dimensional auditory deficit. This concept will be examined through life stories, complex systems of meaning, constructs, and cultural representations. This course of study will examine and critique how disability became pathologized and measure Deaf people’s success in fleeing from disability. Why was Deafness medicalized? What led to the conversion from Oralism to ASL, and its impact on education and culture for the Deaf? History shows us that professionals and medical authorities followed their own paths; therefore, this course will examine the complex debates between proponents of sign language and those of speech. What are new ways of thinking about deafness in relation to the ideas of deafness as that of the nation and the individual?

To understand the complexities of Deaf identities, and the use of ASL as a qualifying property (i.e. shared language) signaling membership in the American Deaf community, this course will entail an in-depth study of collective names, sense of community, shared and distinct values, customs, culture, knowledge, history, social structures and art as the underpinning of Deaf identity. This course will also examine the continuing narrative between the Deaf individual and the hearing society. Deaf communities around the world are as diverse as any other communities but share the primary means of communication as their one commonality: the use of their native sign language and their culture. We will examine the historical disregard for the existential well-being so often practiced against Deaf people by learned people in many societies. Pre-requisites: General Anthropology or Psychology in the Modern World and one Disability Studies course. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

Latin American & Caribbean Civilization
Wednesday 6:20 - 8:00 PM

Aguasaco

Hybrid Asynchronous (In-person and Required Brightspace)

A survey of Latin America's economic, social, political, and cultural development from the Pre-Columbian era to the present. The course will focus on selected topics and themes including: colonization and resistance to colonization; the formation of social structures and labor systems; patterns of dependent development; reform, revolution, and counter-revolution. 4 hr.; 4 cr.

Note: This course begins with a discussion of the concept of "civilization" and the ways it could be applied to the territories, peoples and cultural practices currently labeled as Latin American and/or Caribbean. The program continues with an overview of the pre-Hispanic cultures (Maya, Azteca, Taina & Inca). We will discuss the level of sophistication reached by these groups (Scientific knowledge, Writing, Architecture, Government Systems, etc.) Latter, the class will focus on the European and African cultures and people transplanted into these lands during the colonial period. The object of study is composed by a series of cultural products and practices such as narratives, music, art, dance etc. Using Raymond Williams' concepts of Residual, Emergent and Dominant, each student will analyze the cultural product of her/his choice and will present his/her findings in a class presentation and a final paper.

MCA 31414, 3CWM [38081]Film and Human Rights*Wednesday 6:20 - 8:00 PM*Kopp*Hybrid Asynchronous (In-person and Required Brightspace)

The medium of film has the ability to render human life and its social structures with startling immediacy and intimacy. Movies can introduce us to people we've never met, take us to places we've never been, make us privy to events we did not attend, drag us back into the past or propel us forward into the future; they can make us believe in the make-believe, or shock us with realities we'd rather ignore. This course will examine the work of politically-minded filmmakers, men and women from around the world, who have used the tools of their trade to shine a light in some dark corners: places where all people are not created equal; where all youngsters are not given equal opportunities; where all workers are not paid a living wage or allowed to organize; where all citizens are not free to express themselves. Most of the films will be set in the United States. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)

PHIL 31404, CWNT [41947]Philosophy and Film*Online Asynchronous*Woessner*Online Asynchronous (Brightspace)

Once upon a time, philosophy was a popular pursuit. Citizens discussed the nature of such lofty topics as truth, beauty, and justice in the streets rather than in seminar rooms. As an attempt to recapture this lost legacy, this course examines the artistic medium of film as a possible site of popular philosophical inquiry. By putting cinematic works in conversation with classic and contemporary texts in the western tradition—ranging from René Descartes to Donna Haraway—this course offers an introduction to both western philosophy and film studies. Topics to be discussed include not just the nature of truth, beauty, and justice, but also faith, freedom, skepticism, and moral responsibility.

This is an introductory course, so no background in either philosophy or film studies is required, though a willingness to think critically and to engage in thoughtful discussion is necessary. Our approach will be both chronological and thematic. The cinematic works that will be discussed include: the silent films of Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd; Weimar-era classics such as The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari and M; examples of film noir, screwball comedy, and science fiction; as well as genre-bending films by Akira Kurosawa, Luis Buñuel, Gillo Pontecorvo, Chantal Akerman, Terrence Malick, and Jordan Peele. Students with interests in history, literature, media studies, philosophy, politics, social welfare, urban studies, and the study of the Americas are encouraged to enroll. 4 hr.; 4 cr. (W)(U)
